

2nd Annual Leadership Lab 101

November 3-5, 2010
Tokai University • Honolulu, Hawai'i

Academy 21 announces its second annual Leadership Lab 101, a 3-day workshop on systemic change for 21st century student success.

The Leadership Lab 101 workshop introduces educators to a conceptual framework for change, and invites you to try out new tools and strategies to address a specific problem or issue from your school, district or organization. Participants come away understanding the “Four Arenas of Change” that guide Academy 21’s work – the educational context, organizational culture, professional competencies, and work conditions – engendering a deeper knowledge of methods to influence systemic change and building greater comprehension towards modeling and teaching the 21st century skills vital for students to graduate ready for college, career and citizenship.

The second annual Leadership Lab 101 is presented by Drs. Robert Kegan and Lisa Lahey, both Hawai'i Faculty members and Co-Founding Principals of Minds At Work, as well as recent principal members of the Change Leadership Group at the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

This workshop is most beneficial to change leaders in school district or networks, with preference given to registrations from teams of two or more including: Superintendents, senior administrators with primary responsibility for change leadership, principals, teacher leaders and state-level staff who work with or sponsor networks of schools. Higher education faculty who work with K-12 educators are also invited to attend.

Enrollment is Limited. Registration is on a First Come, First Served Basis with Priority Given to Groups. Space is limited to 120 participants. The registration fee includes a light continental breakfast each day, a workbook with essential readings, worksheets and rubrics, and the program fee.
